The Flavel Lumber and Shingle Company were attached yesterday in a suit filed in the circuit court by the Kelly Logging Company for the sum of $2,119.96. The mill is situated at Warrenton. It is reported that the mill will be closed down for good.

Although the trouble between the O. R. & N. Company and the Longshoremen's union has not been settled yet, it is believed that an understanding has been arrived at, as the union unloaded the steamer St. Paul. The only question in dispute is, who shall the longshoremen receive their orders from.

A. E. Miller came up from Seaside bringing a young man who had been arrested on suspicion of breaking into several houses at Seaside. He was given a preliminary examination before justice of the peace Judd and bound over to the circuit court.

Her old mission and her famous lemons have made Santa Barbara famous. Tourists from all over the world have gone to see her missions, and her lemons have gone all over the world to satisfy the tourist, as well as those living the "simple life." You can get her mission lemons from your grocer.

The cruiser Marblehead arrived in early yesterday morning and proceeded direct to Portland where she will remain until June 15. It is probable that no other cruiser will go to Portland, a change having been made in the program.

The funeral of the late Robert Broom was held yesterday afternoon from Pohl's undertaking parlors the funeral sermon being preached by Rev. W. S. Short. The interment was at Greenwood. The funeral was attended by a large number of the friends of the deceased.

Last evening was children's services at St. Mary's church and the church was crowded. Rev. Father Chapoton delivered a very interesting and instructive sermon. The past week has been devoted to the mission work and has been a most successful one.

The white muslin underwear sale announced in today's paper by C. H. Cooper is of a gigantic nature. It will pay interested parties to find the ad and read it from beginning to end, for the values offered, resemble just as much as the ad does, the big doings of the large department stores elsewhere.

A large shipment of the finest wines, etc., for family use, has just been received by George Lindstrom & Co., who will add a retail bottle goods department to their grocery and general merchandise stock. This store has been growing rapidly and their advertisement will bear watching. Find their ad in today's paper regarding sewing machines.

The excursion to Portland yesterday in honor of "Travelers' Day" at the Lewis and Clark fair came off on scheduled time. A large number of extra cars were ready for service in the event of being required. Only one engine was required to haul the excursion to Portland. Considerable effort had been made to secure a crowd and people were well informed of the wonders of the fair. Forty-five tickets were sold all of whom went up on the excursion. One thousand badges had been procured, but they were not all used.

The readers of this paper daily appreciate the advertising columns of the Morning Astorian more and more. They know that they can rely on the announcements made, because only the most reliable merchants use the columns of this paper. As nearly every advertiser changes copy weekly, adds bear watching for the news they contain. It's the money-saving kind of advertising which the readers see in The Astorian and the wise shopper looks over the ads daily to see what is constantly growing, so that it pays merchants more and more to advertise.

The doctors' union and the lawyers' union will hold a joint smoker at the office of Hon. F. J. Taylor on the evening of June 14. Sometime ago the medical Association entertained the Bar Association with a smoker and this is a return of courtesies. Both organizations are in a flourishing condition and their interests are so closely allied that a mutual admiration has sprung up. The good success of the attorneys, depending to a great extent on the poor success of the doctors. The invitation announces that "polemic discussions, absque ulla fraude, discussions of 'grave' (with the accent on the grave) and mighty problems, affairs of state, art, science, literature, diplomacy, physiology, and physiologia, assafoetida, and other questions.

FARMER GARDENERS

Fruit and Vegetable Gardening a Profitable Investment.

EXPERIENCE IN WASHINGTON

Enterprising Eastern Farmers who Have Settled in Washington Find Raising Fruit and Small Vegetables the Most Profitable Part of Farming.

The Astorian has frequently called attention to the adaptability of Clatsop for gardening and raising fruit; yet nearly every pound of fruit, and every vegetable consumed has to be shipped into Astoria from other localities. For the benefit of the farmers of Clatsop county and the people of Astoria interested in building up the resources of the county, the following taken from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer will give them an idea of the profits accruing from the tilling of the soil:

The Summer Index announces that a special fruit train will soon be in operation of the main line of the Northern Pacific railroad. It is necessary to carry the crops of berries raised in the fields of the Puyallup and Yakima valleys. The train will be loaded daily and hauled to the inland cities of Butte, St. Paul and intermediate points. Growers have established agencies at different places where the fruits are to be sold. The shipments of previous seasons have demonstrated the fact that there is money in the transaction.

A few years ago there was no berry industry in the state. Farmers did not care to investigate the matter of growing such fruits. They planted the lands to potatoes, hops, or alfalfa and waited for the home markets to develop satisfactory demands and insure good prices. To the Pullyup valley may be awarded the credit of working up the berry business. The owners of small tracts sought something to give them financial returns to justify cultivation. They tested blackberries and raspberries and discovered their merits as money makers.

The income of growers in the Puyallup valley for berries alone last year approximated $100,000. The money was paid to small farmers or gardeners. No man had a field of more than fifteen acres. Many patches occupied less than half an acre each. But, by adding the pickings from 300 places every day, the whole shipment amounted to car loads. Then the growers were ready to supply city markets. This was done and the returns from vines to banks were highly satisfactory. The money came from cities far away from the fields of production.

Berry farming is in its infancy. It has merely passed the experimental stage. The returns indicate that it is one of the future great industries of the state. It opens a way to independence for every owner of a small tract of land near a shipping point. It increases the interest in homes and home building. It adds to the commerce of the country and adds in building up rural communities in which people can be contented. It removes the objectionable features of drudgery characteristic of some forms of agriculture and places the small farm on the plane of financial prosperity. Washington needs more fruit trains.
